

Sustainability Training

Project Outline

BIFM Training provides both public and in-house courses across the Government, public and private sector organisations covering all activities and specialisms involved in the management and delivery of an effective real estate portfolio.

DPP provides the sustainability and climate change sessions as both public and in-house tailored courses, ranging from a two hour overview of the subject to a more involved two day introductory course. All the sessions provide:

- Knowledge and understanding of sustainability issues, legislative requirements and business drivers;
- How they affect organisations and real estate;
- Practical measures and tools for delegates to both deal with the challenges and gain the benefits.

The in-house courses provide a tailored version specific to the sustainability issues and corporate programme of the client. These courses have been provided to the Metropolitan Police, DEFRA, Department for Education and Skills (DfES) and Royal Bank of Scotland amongst other public and private organisations.

All courses are robustly managed with expectations set at the start of the course and feedback taken at the end to ensure effective delivery of the training for the delegates. The sustainability courses regularly receive high scores and commendations from delegates on the accessibility of the information and the presenters.

“Sunil Shah is a highly knowledgeable presenter who thoroughly researches his material, and then delivers the training in a very positive and supportive manner, which has the effect of motivating and engaging the delegates. Feedback from delegates and their employers is very positive, and indicates that they have learned a great deal and that this new knowledge will be used in practise. I have no hesitation in recommending Sunil Shah as a professional and highly effective trainer”.
